AIN'T THIS THE LONESOME TOWN?

EDITED BY EDITED BY ROBERT EDGREN

Sorry Man Is Mahmout, the Turk Wrestler, Who Wants to Make Good Against Americans.

HE saddest, loneliest man in New York to-day is a great big Bulgarian Turk named Yussiff Mahmout.

Poor Mahmout! His is a sad lot. He's too strong to roll cigarettes. He's too strong to do anything but wrestle, and alas! he's too strong at that, for none will meet him.

A sad trio wandered disconsolately into The Evening World office yesterday afternoon. First came Mr. George Harrington, "Impresario, late manager for Gunner Moir, of England." Next came Antonio Pierri, manager. Trailing along at the rear of the procession stalked the huge, beturbaned Turk, in his jacket of gold lace, solemn and silent.

The army of protest lined up. We want to see if you won't put another piece in the paper," announced Mr. Harrington, impresario, and Mr. Pierri, in the same breath.

WHERE IS FRANK GOTCH?

'Ere we've been in New York four weeks," went on Mr. Harrington, "and Gotch 'asn't a word to say. V. don't even know where he is. 'E seems to 'ave escaped us entirely. We sent away down to Bulgaria for Mahmout and brought him across from England to wrestle Gotch and take the title away, and "ere we are no nearer a match than before we started. Nobody will wrestle our man. I 'eard a lot about your great wrestlers on the other side, and now not a one can we find. What has become of them? 'I give it up,' said I.

"They've all 'unted their 'oles," conthey to all unted their oles," continued Mr. Harrington, almost tearfully, "We've challenged them all, and the moment they see us coming they 'ide away. We went to see Gotch at the cheatre, and when we waited at the front'e slid out at the rear exit. When we went around to the stage entrance 'e slipped away in front. We didn't even 'ave a look at 'im."

"Yes," broke in Mr. Pierri, "and Jenkins offered to meet our man. Then all of a sudden Jenkins kept very still. What is it? Ah, we know. He has sent to London and has learned all about Mahmout. So he is too busy being a Saturday, Oct. 24. has announced his learned all about (manning the state of the variety of track and roads, in Nassau County, Saturday, Oct. 24. has announced his learned and the state of the variety of o wrestle on the level. MAHMOUT, THE SAD.

"You see," said Pierri, "he is sad because nobody will wrestle him. It is all work, work and no match. We do not want money for wrestling. Manmout can beat Gotch. With the title we can go back to London, and then we can go back to London, and then we can make—what you call—a barrely without travelling around. Not like in this country, where you have to go to 'Frisco and Chicago and Boston' England is only a small country, and for two bob you can trave; a long way. Yes, we must beat Gotch. We will take others first if we can catch any. George Considine he will put $550 with ours and that will make a $1,000 side stake for Gotch. It should be enough. We are willing to risk our money. If Gotch is a sport he will not run away."

Mr. Harrington, impression. Mr. Plant of the divers has already begun on the course.

and Mahmout the Turk filed sadly into the elevator and dropped out of sight.

Do you know what Yussin Mahmout reminds me of? It's one of those rugged, awkward stone bas-reliefs on an Assyrian tomb. He looks like a member of one of those defunct races come to life again. His features are whole figure-long, ape-like arms; huge.

But apart from his appearance !
know nothing about the ability of the saddest and most lonely man in New York. So I called up Bill Brown on the telephone.

'Itello, is this Bill? Say. Bill, can this hig Turk Mahmout wrestle, or is he length over Greaty, but the latter fought hard all the way.

UNCERTAINTY OF RACING SHOWN AT BELMONT TRACK

Golden Legend, Falcada and Melford Beat Out Horses That Looked Winners.

BY VINCENT TREANOR. OLDEN LEGEND, Falcada and Milford were three of the winners at Belmont Park yesterday, which served to illustrate the uncertainty of brose racing. In the race won by Golden Legend Lady Selina was regarded almost a certainty. In the Falcada race Fashion Plate was the "oil in the can." and Animus was a similar good thing simply because the winner was a better horse, so was Falcada in the Fashion may be attributed to one of those CLIFTON, S. I., Oct. 13.—Professional four-ball foursomes were in order this annual Eastern open championship at the Fox Hills Golf Club. The course was in applepie order, and the weather all that could be desired. The whole Atlantic slope was represented in the eld, although metropolitan contestants predominated. The stars out include John Hobers, who lately won the met and Alexander Campbell and Gilbert Nicholis, both of Boston. Alex Smith is absent following the recen: death of his wife. The amateurs par-ticipating were not numerous, the only ones being Chadwick Sawyer, of the Midland Club: F. W. Baldwin, Glen Ridge, H. O. Parsons, Crescent; W. C. Shoup, Englewood, and C. F.
